Social Media: Not All Fun and Games

Social media is very convenient and easy to use, but many people use it too much. In fact, social media can be very addictive. Some people feel that they 31 have to be online or on their phone, and they can't stop. Therefore, social media can get 32 of more important things like studying, sleep, and even 33 time with friends and family in person.

If you've ever felt like this, try a "social media cleanse"—that is, take a 34 from social media. Studies have shown that this has many benefits for users, such as reducing anxiety, 35 the "fear of missing out," and improving their general quality of life. It also makes them more likely to exercise, which further reduces stress.

Like Princess Margaret, everyone has a star sign that corresponds to his or her birthday. Each sign belongs to one of the four categories: fire, earth, air, or water. If two people are born under signs in the same category, they might share similar personality _____ 41 _____.

For example, fire-sign people are often _____ 42 _____ and energetic. With these personality traits, they usually make great leaders. Some famous examples are Napoleon Bonaparte and Winston Churchill.

People born under earth signs tend to make plans before they take _____ 43 _____. They follow their plans and are often successful in _____ 44 _____ their goals. These personality traits are illustrated in the lives of Martin Luther King, Jr., Mother Teresa, and Kobe Bryant.

Air-sign people are often friendly and communicative. They are eager to _____ 45 _____ knowledge and always find things to learn in new experiences. These people are often surrounded by friends. Oscar Wilde, Abraham Lincoln, and Oprah Winfrey are in this category.

So, next time you are not quite sure of yourself, why not look at the sky on a starry night? The stars may open your eyes to new ways of looking at yourself.

As the saying goes, "Necessity is the mother of invention." Many times, people invent things to meet their own needs. Later, the _____ 46 _____ to their problems turn out to be great inventions and change our way of life. One example will illustrate this point.

When Teng Hung-chi was a vocational school student, he worked as a mechanic in a factory. One day, he was using the bathroom in the factory. His hands were dirty because of work, so he did not want to touch the _____ 47 _____. He thought, "If I could wash my hands without touching the faucet, it would be great." Teng then worked hard to _____ 48 _____ this idea into practice. Soon, he invented a faucet _____ 49 _____ by a built-in sensing device. At that time, he was only seventeen. This young inventor later sold the rights to his invention for NT$1.5 million.

Since then, Teng has invented many other things. He represented Taiwan at the IENA exhibition, which is an international exhibition for invention in Germany. He won first _____ 50 _____ there many times. Because of his many great inventions, Teng has become known as "Taiwan's Edison."

The word "blog" is a combination of the words "web" and "log." A blog is like a diary that anyone can read on the Internet. Many are updated every day, providing information about the authors or their opinions on subjects they care about.

Blogs have existed on the Internet since the 1990s; however, people became aware of these online journals (日誌) late in 2004. A well-known dictionary group reported that the word "blog" was the most searched word on their website during the year, and as a result, blog will now be entered into their printed dictionary.

Why have blogs become so popular? One reason is that they provide people with a means of expressing opinions that may not be printed in the mainstream media. People enjoy reading the opinions blog writers share. Many people have become tired of mainstream media, preferring to read more the objective views of news events from blogs.

Another reason blogs are so popular may be that they are simple to begin and then update. Even a person with very little computer knowledge can maintain a blog. No expensive software is required so blogs can be written by anyone with access to a computer.

Blogs have become an important part of many people's information networks. With a new blog being created every 6 seconds, it looks like the blog is here to stay.

() 51. Based on this article, a blog is _____.

- | | |
|-----------------------|----------------------------------|
| (A) easy to update | (B) part of the mainstream media |
| (C) like a dictionary | (D) updated every six seconds |
