<1> Scientific evidence pointing to the reality of global warming is abundant. As surface temperatures on Earth rise, extreme weather is becoming more common. Sometimes, heavy rain results in flood covering large areas. Other times, the situation is the opposite—no rain falls for long periods, creating severe droughts and leaving the ground dry and cracked. Heat waves, where temperatures soar into the high 30s and even 40s, can last for months. Such conditions can make it impossible for farmers to grow grains, fruits, roots and vegetables.

When climate change brings crop failures, people are left hungry. Recent figures show that around 100 million people rely on donations of food from other countries to survive. The food security problem is becoming especially acute in the Pacific region, in small island countries with developing economies. In ones like Vanuatu, Papua New Guinea, and Timor-Leste, many people in low-income families are forced to go hungry or consume smaller portions. Plus, when crops fail and money is tight, many switch to diets consisting mostly of processed foods. They may not take in enough protein, vitamins, and minerals to stay healthy.

Poor nutrition can slow the physical growth of infants and children, so they're thinner, shorter and weaker than they ought to be. It can delay their intellectual development, too. It can cause adolescents and adults to lack energy and leave them vulnerable to diseases. In addition to sending food aid to Pacific islands, wealthy countries must strive to cut greenhouse gases so as to slow global warming. After all, we only have this Mother Earth

49. According to the passage, what do Vanuatu, Papua New Guinea and Timor-Leste have in common?

- (A) They are continental countries. (B) They have developed economies.
(C) They are located in the Atlantic regions. (D) Their people have nutritional problems.

50. Where can we find such an article?

- (A) In Vogue Magazine. (B) In a travel brochure.
(C) BBC newsletters. (D) On Wikipedia.

51. Which of the following statements from Twitter BEST supports the article?

(A)

The concept of global warming was created by and for the Chinese in order to make U.S. manufacturing non-competitive.

(B)

Any and all weather events are used by the global warming hoaxers to justify higher taxes to save our planet! They don't believe it!

(C)

Snowing in Texas and Louisiana, record setting freezing temperatures throughout the country and beyond. Global warming is an expensive hoax!

<2> Running is a simple and effective way of exercise. Even so, there are some mistakes new runners tend to make. These include going overboard, ignoring other forms of exercise, and powering through the pain.

With the first mistake, many novice runners do that because they get overexcited. They think they have to run every day to get fit, so they push themselves too hard. However, it's important to give the body enough time to rest between workouts. Therefore, it's best to ease into a training program in order to avoid injury and make sure it includes rest days. Rookie runners make the second mistake all the time. That's because they focus so much on running that they forget the importance of cross-training. By doing other exercises, they use different muscle groups. They also reduce the risk of injuring themselves and cutting their running short. As for the last mistake, new runners know running can be hard and it's normal for muscles to get sore. However, they don't want a little pain to stop them, so they tough it out anyway. That's fine until it's more than soreness they're feeling. When that happens, it's best to stop running and treat the pain right away.

52. Who is this article most likely directed to?

- (A) Someone who is not interested in running.
- (B) Someone who has been running for a living.
- (C) Someone who is thinking of taking up running.
- (D) Someone who has been coaching runners for years.

53. What do the three mistakes have in common?

- (A) They are impossible to avoid.
- (B) They can result in pain and injury.
- (C) If done right, they provide the best results.
- (D) Only people who've run a long time are at risk.

54. What should rookie runners NOT do?

- (A) Take breaks between running days.
- (B) Work into an exercise plan slowly.
- (C) Stop doing other exercises completely.
- (D) Spend time working different muscle groups.

55. According to the author, what is one belief new runners commonly have?

- (A) There is no gain without pain.
- (B) It's dangerous to go overboard.
- (C) There's no need to run daily.
- (D) Running doesn't require training.

Thanks to their adorable appearance and friendly personalities, the hamster is a favorite among small pets. Commonly called golden hamster, the Syrian hamster is the most popular type of pet hamster. What most people don't know is that this species of hamster is a recent discovery.

They were first found in the Syrian Desert less than 100 years ago. Like other hamsters, they prefer to have their own space. They are so protective of it that they will fight another hamster to the death if it dares to enter their territory. Also, although hamsters sleep during the day, these creatures aren't nocturnal as many people think. They are actually crepuscular, which means they are most active during the time before it gets dark. That's probably because the bugs that they would eat in the wild are also most active during that time. (10 Unit 8)
